

ELIZA'S RULES OF GOOD SOCIAL ETIQUETTE

- Gentle soft laughter directed toward your Escort warms his Feelings for you, no matter how daft the subject.
- A Gentleman should never encircle the waist of an unmarried Lady, and should only be in contact when the music commences, and then immediately disengage when the music ceases.
- A Lady, married or not, must never leave the Dance Hall unattended.
- Ladies ought to refrain from loud and outgoing Display lest they be characterized as too available in the eyes of new Friends and possible Suitors.
- Ill-mannered showing of Affection tends to taint a young Woman and tarnish her unblemished Reputation.
- Always remember, late evenings are hard on the constitution, and Ladies ought to leisurely prepare to take their leave at least three dances before the conclusion of the Ball. Too many young Women fall Prey to roguish Behavior exhibited at its close when Male tensions rise unexpectedly.
- A Lady should always carry sufficient Coin in the event that the over-consumption of Libation renders her Escort incapable of conveying her to her dwelling.

Ladies! May these Suggestions help you avoid those situations that prevent you from receiving the honest Affections of a True Clamper.
